PASSING OF THE JITNEY

The jitney is no longer a menace to the legitimate street car business. The jitney owners at one time threatened to ruin the street railway business, but they have fallen down now in so many of the cities that it is very evident that the auto can never take from the cities the luxury and the necessity of the street railway. The jitney cannot meet the demands of traffic in bad weather, and for that reason alone if there were none other, the jitney cannot succeed the street railway. The jitney has also made a financial failure. Owners in the early days of the invasion hired drivers and paid them salaries, but they have begun now to put their cars out only on a commission basis and as they are worn out and thrown upon the trash heap, new cars are not purchased and installed. As the real tests of bad weather come and the jitney fails to make good, people who depend upon transportation facilities, abandon the jitney and patronize the street railway, for the reason that the street railway is the most useful institution of any city.

That car lines are doing reasonably well in Oklahoma, is demonstrated at Chickasha where the road is bonded for $100,000 and where the bond in-

THE OWEN NOMINATION

The sentiment for the nomination of Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma for vice-president is not confined to this state. That it is not only local, is demonstrated by the interest that is being taken in the movement all over the country. Senator Owen is a man who is popular all over the country. Senator Owen is a man who is popular in New England and in Oregon and Washington. He is broad enough and big enough to attract the attention of the entire union and when Oklahoma indorses him on the 11th of this month in state convention, it will probably make the first move upon the part of any state that will result in naming the nominee of democracy for vice-president. The following letter to the Ardmoreite from S. T. Bledsoe of Chicago, dealing with the Owen nomination, tells a story that will be of intense interest to all Oklahomans:

"EDITOR ARDMOREITE:
 I read with interest your editorial upon the nomination of Senator R. L. Owen, as vice-president, at the coming democratic election.

I have had occasion to be in Washington a number of times recently, and have tried to ascertain what the public sentiment is there as to the most available man for such nomination, and I am quite sure that a decided majority of the party leaders and active members of both the senate and the house regard Senator Owen as the best and most available man for the office.

The hope of having Senator Owen nominated on the democratic ticket for vice-president is not at all a distant dream, but if heartily supported by his home people, a very strong probability.

I have not seen the senator for some time, and have not the remotest knowledge as to how he feels about the matter.

Yours sincerely,

S. T. BLEDSOE,
 Chicago, Ill., April 4, 1916."

ENRAPTURED THRONGS OF JOYOUS PEOPLE.

so splendidly adapted for display work could not have been improved upon. In a beautiful setting of pink roses, cut glass chandeliers and pot plants, the ladies foot wear attracted the admiring gaze of the throngs while the men's shoes sustained with the color scheme of red and white almost equally the delicate display in the other window. Like a gem however the center show case in purple and white, only white footwear being displayed, attracted immediate notice. The interior was also in full accord with the window display flowers and ferns being tastefully arranged. Guests were invited to register.

City Drug Store.

The City Drug Store made the most of its prominent location and windows which were artistically decorated with purple and white, entwined in a lattice work which set off the windows with beautiful effect. On the inside the crowds were entertained by Mrs. Gravitt with a recital on the Edison machine of classics which had been secured especially for the Spring Style Show Week.

Madden & Company.

The Madden company contented itself with a window display. Disappointed by the nonarrival of equipment which had been ordered from New York an interior display had to be abandoned in the eleventh hour. The windows, however, in a color scheme of purple and green, attracted and sustained the attention and interest of the throngs. From an artistic standpoint they could hardly have been improved one while the dress goods and furnishings displayed were as elegant as could be found anywhere.

Spragins Hardware Company.

The J. H. Spragins Hardware company would not allow its neighbors to "put them in the shade" with flowers and trellis work, and an Overland car, artistically decorated. The crowds were compelled to pause and admire the store. The store was not opened, but the attractiveness of the windows fully accomplished the object sought.

At Lynn's.

While the Lynn Shoe Store was not open, the windows were neatly decorated and well lighted and displayed to an excellent advantage the different stylish footwear for spring months.

A. B. Rawlins Company.

The Rawlins furniture store was brilliantly lighted and was handsomely decorated, with the national colors predominating. In one of the big show windows a library suite in oak was on display and the other window was filled with a handsome collection of aluminum ware. The windows were visited by hundreds of friends of the institution, which has earned a solid place with the shoppers of the city.

O. L. Dennes.

The windows at the popular and new store of O. L. Dennes were especially trimmed and decorated for Fashion Week, and delighted the vast crowds in that section of the city. The decorations consisted chiefly of flowering plants, and there was a window display of men's apparel, consisting of hats, suits, shirts and the ladies' window was filled with waists, skirts and umbrellas that were displayed by the hand of the artist.

Stubblefield & Colley.

This enterprising firm was open to its friends throughout the evening and made an especial display of fruits and berries and vegetables that was a delight to the hundreds of visitors. The proprietors and their clerks were on hand, and visitors were well entertained.

The Fair.

The Fair, owned by Joe Weiss, did not make an especial effort to entertain its friends, but the store was decorated handsomely, the merchandise was well displayed, the store was brilliantly lighted, and there was a feast to behold from the plate glass front. The windows had been especially trimmed for the occasion and the store looked the part of belonging to a big retail center of one of the important cities of the country.

The Lowenstein Company.

The Lowenstein Dry Goods company was another attraction which repaid the visit. The windows were exquisitely dressed and decorated, green and white being the color scheme.

One feature of the windows was perhaps the most unique of its kind. A real bird of paradise, now absolutely unobtainable, and secured by Mrs. Lowenstein at a cost running into great figures, is the centerpiece. It is perhaps the only one in the state, if not in the southwest, and was the admiration of the crowds.

Fekler & Company.

Fekler's Grocery Store stood out resplendent in the national colors, and was greatly admired. The painstaking efforts which had been spent on the decorations of the store were greatly admired, and made it conspicuous on the south side of Main street.

Further west on the same side of the street, Gribham's, the five and ten-cent store, and in fact all of them showed an interest in the occasion. Windows were dressed and all maintained the spirit of the occasion.

The Home Product.

F. J. Ramsey did not make elaborate preparations for Style Show, but he had an unique arrangement of window displays that were a credit to his store and city. The window to the left of the entrance carried a suggestion of loyalty to home factory enterprises. The window was filled with DeWitt cigars, made in Ardmore with home labor and with well paid, clean, healthful hands. It was a "buy it made in Ardmore" suggestion, and it was also a suggestion to the smokers to buy their cigars made in Ardmore. The Merit line of toilet articles were displayed to excellent advantage, and the store entertained many hundreds of visitors.

While the DeWitt cigars received this special recognition, Mr. DeWitt himself, who is an expert in the trade of cigar-making, was in the show window at the D. & S. confectionery, making cigars, while hundreds of people who had never visited a factory of the kind, watched the process with intense interest.

West Main Street.

West Main street from A to C was not without its attractions last night, although somewhat removed from the center of the business district.

The business houses of this section were well decorated and the crowds despite the rain took ample time to view the many attractive window displays.

The millinery establishments of Miss Abbie Palley and Miss Fern Ryburn held many of the passersby who remarked upon the beauty of the latest creations in women's hats.

Fred Horn also, though he deals in apparel for "mere man" had an attractive display that created favorable comment.

Solomon, the baker, had a window filled with Easter novelties that was attractive, and Varnell, the confectioner, likewise had his best to the front last night.

The Majestic and Theatrum aside from putting on good programs for last night's shows had the building well decorated and extended the courteses of the "profession" to the visiting band men of the Fifth Field Artillery Band.

Squires, the electrician, had his usual attractive window, embellished with several novelties that attracted attention.

Miss Moroney's Art Store had a very attractive show window.

Dilworth's 5 and 10 Cent Store was attractively decorated and had on display many novelties.

The new Woolworth store was crowded all during the evening.

Miss Cecile R. West, proprietor of the Victrola Parlors arranged an attractive musical program for her guests, including some of the greatest artists in the musical world. Miss Ellen Dickson of this city favored the guests with a vocal solo that was roundly applauded. She was accompanied on the piano by Mr. Schoonmaker who also played a piano accompaniment to a Victrola record of Fritz Kreisler, the great violinist, which was a decided novelty. Miss West gave as favors white carnations and a dainty hand-painted card.

The Patterson Auto Sales Company and the Reo agency had attractive windows and had displayed cars that attracted the attention of prospective buyers.

Raines, the saddle man, had on display an attractive line of traveling bags as well as his regular line.

E. B. Luke had his building decorated for the occasion and in his window were displayed some of the finest pianos on the American market.

Downing, the furniture man, the Chickasaw Furniture Company, and A. C. Holman, the sheet metal worker, had their places nicely decorated and attractive line of goods on display.

Theo Torrerson, the decorator, had an attractive window, and his stock well displayed, and Bridgman was showing a nice line of pictures and picture mouldings.

The New State Hardware Company had their windows attractively decorated with seasonable sporting goods, and Shuman's Flower Shop, next door, was a perfect riot of flowers that were eagerly purchased by the passing throng. London, the clothier, had an attractive window, and Wilson Newman's new store was also brilliantly illuminated to show off a fine line of hardware.

The Frame Drug Company had a good display, and their store was an attractive stopping place for the passersby, and W. Newman also was showing something nice in the way of dry goods and gent's furnishings.

Hyden and Adams had an especially attractive window which indicated that they had gone to considerable expense to prepare for the big style show. This was an especially attractive spot for the passersby all the evening and was admired by hundreds.

DeWitt, proprietor of the DeWitt cigar factory, had an attractive window display at the D. & S. confectionery. He gave a practical demonstration of how the DeWitt cigar is made, he had two of his employees working rolling the cigars and the deft fingers of the two young ladies were a revelation to many who smoke cigars but never give a thought as to how they are produced.

The opening of the style show was a decided success in this section and if the weather man will permit, will be greater as the show progresses.

NEGROES FIGHT SEGREGATION

Formal Protest Filed Against Oklahoma City Ordinance.

Oklahoma City, Okla., April 6.—Formal protest has been filed by prominent negroes of this city against the emergency ordinance enacted by the city commissioners last week and made immediately effective, which operates to segregate the negro and white residents of the city from each other. The protest sets forth the belief on the part of the protestants that the ordinance ignores and violates the rights of a number of the citizens who are peaceable and law-abiding.
